Cancer 101: What Can Cause Cancer?

Dr. Samantha Boshart is a family doctor and the Regional Aboriginal Lead for the South West Regional Cancer Program. Last month Dr. Boshart kicked off the Cancer 101 Series by explaining what cancer is. This month's article explores what may be contributing to a person's risk of developing cancer. Stay tuned next month for more information on cancer prevention.

What causes cancer? That can be an intimidating question. While we know that cancer is your cells growing and dividing when they shouldn't, there is no way of knowing exactly what caused your cells to go rogue. When I reflect on all of the things that may contribute to the development of this illness, I think about Colonization and the disruption of our ability to care for ourselves in the way we know how, whether it be a disconnection from land and water, family, spirit, or self. The negative impact this has had on our health and well-being continues in our communities today.

Western approaches focus on the physical and environmental risk factors that may support the growth and development of cancer. These risk factors include things like sun exposure, obesity, smoking, harmful chemicals at work or home, and not having a diet high in fruits and vegetables.

Substances and exposures that are capable of causing cancer are called carcinogens. Just because you are exposed to a carcinogen doesn't mean it will always cause cancer. Every person's risk of developing cancer is unique and depends on many factors including how they are exposed to the carcinogen, length and intensity of exposure, and the person's genetic makeup.

Some known carcinogens that people come into with contact regularly are things like alcohol, commercial tobacco smoke, and processed meats like bologna or other deli meats. Some probable or likely carcinogens are wood stoves, frying food, and red meat.

In my opinion, the first step towards health should always be taking care of your whole self – physical, mental, spiritual, and emotional. I believe that to be truly well, all these parts are important. When any one of these areas is under attack, it can create opportunity for disease. It's important to pay attention to any emotions that you may be holding in your body, negative thought patterns about yourself or others, and if you feel disconnected from the spirit.

When it comes to cancer, my goal is not to strike fear into your hearts and minds, but rather to empower you with the knowledge to make the best decisions for yourself. The good news is that chronic diseases like cancer are not inevitable and can, to a great extent, be prevented. Healthy lifestyle choices are shown to reduce the risk of cancer by one-third, and researchers have calculated that healthy lifestyles can potentially prolong a person's lifespan by seven to 14 years.

I hope you found this month's article helpful. Next month I will be diving into some of the things you can do to prevent or reduce your risk of developing cancer.

Until next time,
Dr. Samantha Boshart

ECHO VALLEY GOLF CLUB

South West
Regional Cancer Program
in partnership with Cancer Care Ontario

The Association of Iroquois and Allied Indians (AIAI) is proud to partner with the South West Regional Cancer Program to host their first 'Golfing for Wellness Tournament' at Echo Valley Golf Club on August 30, 2018. The focus of the event is to raise awareness about the importance of men's health and wellness in the context of a fun and relaxed environment. In general, men find it hard to admit when they are having a health problem and can often adopt an 'ignore it and it will go away' mindset. When health concerns are dealt with early, they can often be treated before they become a more serious health problem. It is our hope that this event will empower men to take control of their health by learning about potential warning signs, when to seek help, and what healthy lifestyle behaviours and wellness strategies can help to prevent these health issues from developing in the first place. Participants will have the opportunity to engage with various health and wellness organizations throughout the day and will receive information on how to maintain their wellness for their mind, body, and spirit.

To register for the 1st Annual Golfing for Wellness Tournament contact Brandy Cornelius at bcornelius@aiai.on.ca or Carolyn S. Doxtator at cdoxtator@aiai.on.ca or phone (519) 434-2761.
