

SAUGEEN MUSEUM

Having an Indigenous museum that focuses on the people, the history, visual arts, and traditions, among other things, can serve as a way of cultural preservation while also bridging the gap between Indigenous and non-Indigenous people. In general, a museum has the potential to improve health and well-being while also bringing community and people together.

"As someone who has had the opportunity to visit the Abenaki museum in Quebec, it has offered solace and closure to my unanswered questions regarding my history, traditions, and ways of life." -N.B

We believe that Saugeen would significantly benefit from having a space for gathering, learning and education, growth and connection. We want to know your thoughts as a community, as it would take a team to accomplish something like this.

WE WANT YOUR THOUGHTS

Please Visit Our Survey:

<https://www.surveymonkey.com/r/CT7X6MH>

By: Natalie Baillargeon and Dave Root